

It would be a shame if the no call list in wisconsin is reversed. The calls where not only annoying, but it was the type of individuals that were calling. I would be on vacation and just be a home to relax and I would get a call. I would say I am not interested and hang up. They would call me right back and try again. I have also had calls for my husband and have told them he is not interested and they would ask to talk to him saying I don't have the right to speak for him. I would tell them I help pay for the telephone expense and that I didn't call them, but that they called me and they need to get off of my phone line. So, it is not only the interruption of your private life at home, but it is also how some calls can have an emotional affect on you. WE NEED THE WISCONSIN DO NOT CALL LIST.
